Nash Boutros does Evil in Woodbury on June 25 at 6:30 p.m.

Please RSVP to Carol Stone (editor@cthumanist.org or (203) 264-8546) by Monday, June 23.

At our brainstorming meeting at the beginning of this year, someone requested a discussion on evil for the Woodbury dinner group. This request will finally bear fruit on Wednesday, June 25 (the date was wrong in the May newsletter) at the Curtis House in Woodbury. In order to provide sufficient time for a lively discussion as well as a presentation and dinner, we will begin at 6:30 p.m.

About our speaker: Nash Boutros, M.D., Professor of Psychiatry and Neurology at Yale University, will talk to us about "Humanism and the Problem of Evil."

"Evil" is one of many English words whose meanings have been influenced by the King James translations of Greek and Hebrew words in the Bible. Popular discussions of villains like Osama bin Laden, Timothy McVeigh, or mothers who kill their own children may feature this word, but what does it mean?

In English "evil" seems to connote "excessive" badness (this is clearer in German, where the words Uebel and ueber mean "evil" and "over."). In the 23rd Psalm, "I will fear no evil" really means little more in the original Hebrew than "I won't be afraid of any harm, or trouble, or unpleasantness (ra-a)." In Plato's philosophy evil became a kind of abstract reality, a force or principle in the world or in human nature that makes bad things happen, and this influenced Christianity. In New Testament Greek ("deliver us from evil"), apo tou ponerou can mean "from evil" or "from the evil person" or "from the Evil one (the Devil)"; ho poneros suggests one who not only causes terrible things to happen but enjoys doing so. Shakespeare's Iago has been described as acting out of "motiveless malignity."

Dr. Boutros will bring us up-to-date on current research and consider the question of what, if anything, does "evil" mean to Humanists? Is it anything more or less than "really, really bad"? What causes some people to become "evil" or to do "evil" things?

David Schafer at Hungry? GA 2003

As many of us are aware, David Schafer is a member of the board of HUUmanists – the humanist sub-organization of the Unitarian Universalist Association. David reports that the HUUmanists have been granted four slots on the program of the upcoming General Assembly in Boston. On Friday morning, June 27, at 10:00 they will present a panel on the topic “If Not God, What? – A Humanist Elevator Speech.” Participants in the printed program will include Rev. Sarah Oelberg (Hanska, MN), president of HUUmanists, and Dr. David Schafer. Since the program was finalized they have added two younger panelists, both UU Humanist ministers, Revs. Brian Eslinger (Ames, IA) and Kathleen Korb (Naples, FL). This panel will be repeated on Saturday afternoon, June 28, at 1:30, when the annual meeting of HUUmanists will follow it immediately.

The other two program slots, on the Monday of June 30 at 9:45 a.m. and again at 4:00 p.m., will be filled by Prof. David E. Bumbaugh, Jr., of Meadville/Lombard Theological School, whose phrase, “vocabulary of reverence,” was cited by the present UUA President Sinkford as an inspiration for his controversial “language of reverence” initiative when he indicated his personal preference for

Humanist Hero Talk at FUUS

At 10:00 a.m. on Sunday, June 22, during the normal Sunday Morning Service at the First Unitarian Universalist Society Of New Haven, 608 Whitney Avenue in New Haven, our very own Rev. Douglas Peary will be presenting on Steve Allen.

Steve Allen, the comedian, who entertained and created the Tonight Show before Johnny Carson, was outspoken on religious and criminal issues. Once when he spoke out against the mafia he found a horses leg on his front step.

He wondered why we only hear about Catholic Mafioso and why the Catholic Church never speaks out against the Mafia. Allen had a son who spent several years in a Jesus Cult. Allen became a student of the Bible and wrote several books on his view of the Bible and theistic teachings. He discovered Humanism and became an active Humanist spokesman for several years until his death. He wrote over 50 books and it has been said that he never had an unpublished thought. He said the most inappropriate phrase to describe the Bible is "The Good Book" because it condones acts which are illegal or immoral and is filled with error. He said the God of the Bible is a monstrous, vengeful tyrant exceeding in bloodthirstiness and insane savagery the depredations of Hitler, Stalin, Pol Pot, Attila the Hun and any other mass murderer of ancient or modern history.

He used his sense of humor to make the world a better place to live. When asked what he thought of sex on television he said, "You would have to be careful of the antenna."

He wrote about the end of life, "The Years. The number doesn't matter now; the years are coming fast. What matters is their quality and which shall be the last. I wish you well in any case, and if by dying first, I could improve your coming days I'd happ'ly take the worst... So here's to hope, which never turns its eyes to what is past, but runs into the future years unearthing joy at last."
